Holy Rosary Review

Over the last 18 months, our former Computer Lab has been transformed into an Innovation Lab. What is an Innovation Lab? It is an engineering STEM (Science, Technology, Engineering and Math) lab where students learn to brainstorm, create, engineer, and invent. Many businesses are also creating Innovation Labs including Walmart, Starbucks, and Citibank to help them fast-track new products, understand market trends, and develop solutions for customers.

We were able complete this dramatic transformation with funding we received from an EANS grant. The purpose of the EANS program was to provide services to eligible non-public schools to address the impact that Covid-19 is having on schools and teachers in the state.

We began the metamorphosis by donating our 15-year-old desk top computers and accompanying furniture. We ordered jazzy furniture that would fit together like puzzle pieces, so that students would have the ability to move the tables to fit groups of two, six, or more depending on their project. Some of the new equipment that rests on these tables includes 3D printers, coding robots, and iMacs for special projects. Royal blue cabinets fill the back wall of the lab, and hold myriads of multicolored LEGOS and Con-Strux that the students are busily using to create what fills their minds. Some creations are even mounted onto the LEGO wall.

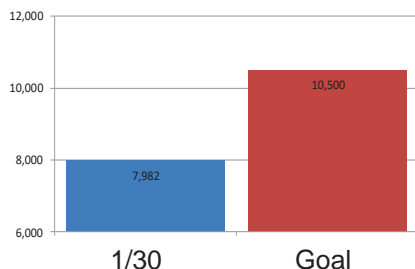

This Innovation Lab is on its way to becoming an engineering mecca for our students to brainstorm, create, and invent. Holy Rosary students are blessed to have so many opportunities to enjoy the latest technology.
